The DIG Into Gardening Symposium is Polk County Master Gardeners' research-based gardening and horticulture education event. Polk County Master Gardeners is a volunteer service program of ISU Extension and Outreach with 350+ Master Gardeners providing an average of 13,000 volunteer hours per year. During this premiere event, "DIG" attendees will learn the latest gardening techniques and best practices from a variety of experts including ISU staff, educators from across the state, and local Master Gardeners. They will also have several opportunities during the event to visit with vendors who are ready to share their products and expertise.

"DIG" is open to all from the home gardener to the horticulture pro. Located in central Iowa, it is anticipated to draw an audience of 200 or more passionate gardeners, horticulture professionals, and local experts.

"DIG" will feature keynote speakers, breakout sessions, and hands-on workshops. The home gardener or seasoned professional will walk away informed, inspired, and ready to dig into their gardens this season!
